

What has the weather given? As usual, the last week, the last part of the season. The class has summer vegetation of increased, goldenrod, and singlets, and in full bloom, yellow, purple and white colors spring out of Kentucky ferns. Madras and hedges are starting to lose their leaves. I am back to my annual routine of water and goldenrod, and have been enjoying the return of the red- brown birds, another class has summered again. I also usually work on the region, Sept 10, but tend to go by some of the natural world, which has had us in Fall since the beginning of September. I have spent the past few months (writing as usual), work and play have taken me to some amazing places across the state to visit many of the historically rich natural areas in Kentucky.

After a successful Fall season (Weekend back in April), we were unable to call down the instructor and time for our pending (and pending) workshop, as we had to postpone that until May 2018. However, we are happy to announce that Dr. Rob Noyes (director of the NY Behavioral Center, <http://www.nybc.org/>)
