

Message from the President

By Louise Williams, Secretary, New York Science Foundation, President

Based on numerous requests from members, I am pleased to announce that with this issue of our newsletter we begin a series entitled "What's Going On in Kentucky". This series is designed to inform our members about the activities and other news items that they might expect to see during each reporting period. For the most part, we will be reporting the news with brief and to the point coverage. We hope that all of you will find the series both informative and useful.

As I mentioned in the previous newsletter, my most recent two significant contributions to the state are reporting on energy, its resources, and its markets. While the day job takes precedence, I would like to report several experiments in the area of energy and its markets.

The year is under close review as usual and the meeting announced members in the newsletter. As the meeting members will have a opportunity to view general information about our activities during our general business meeting. This is an important opportunity for each of you to present your own report and the members will also be aware of it at that time of the year.

The first meeting should prove to be an interesting one. We have some good speakers lined up and are growing in size and membership steadily. The meeting has changed to be an annual event in practice and to have members report. Please make your reservation and plan to attend the meeting in person.
